

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

The author, indeed, shows in many places an unfamiliarity with history outside of the newspapers. On p. 3 he seems to think that Henricopolis was at the site of Richmond. Certainly there never was a new Henrico at Tuckahoe.

St. Johns Church (p. 8) was not called St. Johns when it was built, but was given that name about 1829. An account is given of Arnold's occupation of Richmond; but not of that by Cornwallis later in the same year. The plan for Gabriel's Insurrection (pp. 52-53) had been arranged much more carefully than would be thought from the account given here.

On page 198 it is stated in regard to William and Mary College that "the Assembly after the burning of the town of Henrico, ordered it to be built in Williamsburg." Henrico was burnt in 1622 and William and Mary was not chartered until 1692-3. The two College plans had nothing to do with each other.

A series of views of Richmond at various dates is reproduced and adds to the value of what, as has been stated, is a very useful book.

DR. WILLIAM LEROY BROWN, compiled by Thomas L. Brown, assisted by Bessie Lee Brown and Sally T. Ordway, New York. The Neale Publishing Company 1912, pp. 247, with portraits.

Dr. Brown did admirable work as an officer of the ordnance department of the Confederacy; but his great lifework was what he did for education in the South after the war; especially as President of the Alabama Agricultural and Mechanical College. The story of his life was worth preserving, and it has been well told by the authors of this book.

A large part of the Volume consists of letters to and from Dr. Brown, articles on his life and work other than the authors, and addresses by Dr. Brown himself.

THE LAND WHERE WE WERE DREAMING and other Poems of Daniel Bedinger Lucas. Edited by Charles W. Kent, Ph. D., and Virginia Lucas with a critical introduction by Charles W. Kent, Ph. D. University Edition, Richard G. Badger. The Gorham Press Boston [1913], pp. 252 with portrait.

As our review department has to be confined to historical subjects, we can only note the receipt of this collection of Judge Lucas' poems.

CAPTAIN ROGER JONES OF LONDON AND VIRGINIA—SOME OF HIS ANTECEDENTS AND DESCENDANTS. With appreciative notices of the Families of Bathurst, Belfield, Browning, Carter, Catesby, Cocke, Graham, Fauntleroy, Hickman, Hoskins, Latane—Lewis, Meriwether, Skelton, Walker, Waring and others. By Judge L. H.